

PRESS RELEASE

New Managing Director to take over at InTraffic on September 1, 2017

Current Managing Director Jan Koers will be resigning his position at InTraffic after nine years, to be succeeded by Bert van Elburg on September 1st, 2017. Mr. Van Elburg most recently served as Director at engineering services company Altran.

Bert van Elburg held a variety of senior executive and executive positions at various service providers for many years. He was most recently employed at Altran, a global innovation and engineering consulting firm, and previously at a service provider specializing in technical infrastructure, including traffic and transport.

Chief Innovation Officer

Jan Koers will continue his career as InTraffic's Chief Innovation Officer, and will therefore remain involved in the company. Mr. Koers, commenting on his new role: "I will be turning 60 on September 10th of this year, and the milestone birthday seemed like a good opportunity for me and my wife, Christa, to start winding down. In my new part-time role as Chief Innovation Officer, I will continue to contribute to InTraffic's development and to the traffic and transport industry."

About InTraffic

Established in 2003 as a joint venture of IT company ICT Automatisering and engineering firm Movares, InTraffic has since evolved into an independent company with 180 employees.

IT Specialist in Traffic and Transport

InTraffic manufactures and maintains complex information and operating systems for the traffic and transport industry. Jan: "We create safe, sustainable, and reliable traffic systems and contribute to the wealth and wellbeing of the Dutch public." The combination of industry expertise, years of experience and highly specialized employees has established InTraffic as the leading IT specialist in transport and traffic in the Netherlands.
